This week's 'Attempt at Humour':

A man lying on his deathbed called to him his doctor, his pastor and his lawyer. "I am going to die tonight and I want to prove that when you go to heaven you can take it all with you. So to my three most entrusted friends, you three of course, I am leaving $50,000 in these envelopes. When I die, you must come to the funeral and put the envelopes in my coffin with me." The man then handed the three men identical envelopes.

The next day they each received the news that the previous night the old man had died. So each knew they must go to his funeral and fulfil his death wish.

Standing over the coffin one week later, the pastor confessed, "I can't hide what I've done. I took $10,000 from the envelope because the church needed to be painted."

As he did so, the doctor started to fidget then finally confessed, "I took $30,000 from the envelope because the hospital needed a new wing."

Then the lawyer said, "You bunch of crooks. I wrote him a cheque for the full amount!"
