Good, Better, Best!

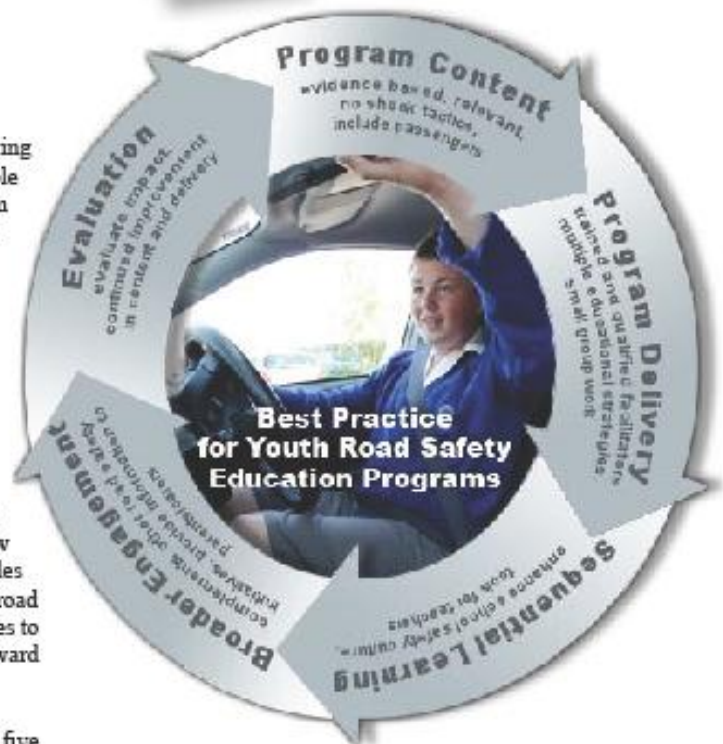

Message from the Managing Director,
RYDA Australia, Terry Birss

At RYDA we teach students the value of selecting a motor vehicle that has the highest possible Australasian New Car Assessment Program (ANCAP) star rating that indicates the level of safety they provide in the event of a road crash. For greatest safety it is recommend that consumers should only buy ANCAP 5 star rated vehicles.

Choosing a road safety education program is a bit like selecting a safe car – you should only choose a program that performs best when bench-marked against what research indicates will produce the best outcome for the students. Most jurisdictions across Australia and New Zealand have published guidelines or principles on what constitutes “Best Practice” for youth road safety education. RYDA has used these guidelines to help produce a highly respected and effective, award winning Program.

The best practice principles can be distilled into five broad themes: program content, program delivery, consistent sequential learning, broad community engagement and evaluation. Following are some of the key elements of a “Five Star” road safety education program:

- ✓ Focus on attitude and awareness
- ✓ Do not include shock tactics
- ✓ Include the influence of passengers
- ✓ Apply multiple educational strategies including small group work
- ✓ Do not include practical driver training
- ✓ Evaluate the impact on participants road use behaviour and attitudes

Aware that inappropriate messages to students can cause harm, RYDA Australia continues to make a very substantial investment in the RYDA Program to ensure that students receive a program that consistently meets best practice road safety education standards.

Further details including a full list of the “Best Practice” guidelines and source document references are available from our website www.ryda.org.au
